

Arthur Auerbach, CPA

Arthur Auerbach, CPA, is a retired tax consultant from Goodman and Company of McLean, VA and Atlanta, (now Dixon Hughes Goodman) specializing in tax consulting and financial planning for individuals and closely held businesses. He is a member of the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Greater Washington Society of Certified Public Accountants, and the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants. He is a former member of the AICPA Individual Tax Resource Panel, the Tax Commissioners Liaison committee member of the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants, and also served as a member of the Advisory Board for the District of Columbia Office of Tax Revenue. He is a past chair of the Virginia Society Tax Committee. Additionally, he is a nationally recognized lecturer on a variety of tax topics for the continuing education requirement for CPAs.

Over the course of 40-plus years, Mr. Auerbach has managed a tax department, and has taught intermediate and cost accounting at Pace University as an adjunct professor. He was an editor for the Tax Research Institute of America. He has also authored several articles for trade association periodicals and he has recently appeared on television evening news programs, answering various tax questions. He is a current editor for the Journal of Accountancy.

Mr. Auerbach holds a BBA degree in accounting from Pace University in New York.